How to use this manual

Read Sections 2–5 once before you start. They explain how the system is put together and who is allowed to do what. Sections 6–19 are your day-to-day reference, following the console screen by screen in the order you will meet them. Sections 20–22 show the applicant's side of everything you do, so you can help a client who is looking at a different screen from yours. Section 23 covers the settings PRDF can change without a developer. Section 24 is what to be aware of, and Section 25 is the acceptance record.

You need no technical knowledge to use this manual or the console. Where something is handled by PRDF's technical contact rather than by you, it says so.

One application runs through the whole manual. Blue Harvest Aquaculture (Pty) Ltd — R750 000 over 12 months — was taken all the way from submission to payout to produce these screenshots. You can follow that same case from Section 7 through to Section 14 and watch the numbers agree at every step.

1. About this manual

This manual describes the PRDF Admin Console as a SuperAdmin sees it — which is all of it. It covers every screen, every tab and every control, in the order you will meet them, together with the rules behind them.

It assumes no technical knowledge. If you can use email and a web browser, you can use this console and you can follow this manual. Where something is genuinely out of your hands and belongs to PRDF's technical contact, the manual says so plainly rather than leaving you to discover it.

Some rules in this manual are suggestions and some are absolute. Where a rule is absolute — where the system will simply refuse, no matter who you are — it is marked as such, because knowing the difference saves you from arguing with a screen that is never going to give way.

1.1 What a SuperAdmin can do that others cannot

- See every case regardless of who it is assigned to
- Move a case to any stage, stepping in for the role that normally owns that stage
- Grant and remove roles, including Admin
- Reset someone's two-step sign-in, so they can set it up again on a new phone
- Move money — pay out a loan and record repayments against it
- Read every report, and the full history of who did what

Stepping in for another role is a SuperAdmin-only power, and the one to treat with respect. You can move a case forward even when the person whose job it is has not yet signed it off. The system will not stop you, and it will record permanently that it was you who did it. Use this when something genuinely has to be unblocked — somebody is away, or a case is stuck — and not simply to save a colleague a telephone call. Every stage exists because somebody is accountable for it.

1.2 Other documents

Two of these are written for readers like you. The rest are technical records kept alongside the system, listed here so you know they exist and can ask for them if a question goes beyond this manual.

Document	Covers
PRDF Client Portal — User Manual	The applicant's side in full. Sections 20–22 of this manual summarise it
The credit model	How interest, fees and penalties are worked out, and why
Role definitions	The formal list of roles and what each may do
Testing guide	Step-by-step walkthroughs and the test accounts to use
Operations and support notes	For PRDF's technical contact: how the system is run and what to do when it misbehaves

1.3 Short forms used in this manual

These appear on screen as well as in this document, so they are worth knowing. Everything else is written out in full.

Short form	Stands for	What it means here
PRDF	People's Republic Development Fund	The lender — you
SLA	Service Level Agreement	The time standard a case is expected to be dealt with in. A case past it is flagged as SLA Breached

NFS	Non-Financial Support	Mentorship, training and compliance help given to a client alongside the loan
MFA	Multi-Factor Authentication	Two-step sign-in — a password plus a code from a phone
POPIA	Protection of Personal Information Act	South African law governing how personal information is handled
CIPC	Companies and Intellectual Property Commission	Where a business is registered; the source of a registration certificate
CSD	Central Supplier Database	The government supplier register; applicants upload their report from it
SARS	South African Revenue Service	The tax authority; the source of a tax clearance certificate
PO	Purchase Order	A confirmed order from a buyer, used as the basis for purchase-order funding
XLSX	Excel Workbook	A spreadsheet file. Export Excel downloads data that opens directly in Excel, with amounts as numbers and dates as dates
PDF	Portable Document Format	The standard document format applicants upload in
SMS	Short Message Service	A text message

2. The system at a glance

There are two websites. You use one of them; your applicants use the other. They show different things to different people, but they are both looking at the same single set of records — so the moment you change something, the applicant sees the result, and the moment they upload something, it is waiting for you.

Website	Address	Who signs in
Client Portal	prdf-lms.vercel.app	Applicants and borrowers. Covered in Sections 20–22, and in its own manual.

Staff and applicants can never cross over. A member of staff cannot sign in to the client portal, and an applicant cannot sign in to the console — not even by typing in the other address. The two are kept separate on purpose.

2.1 How the system decides what you are allowed to do

What you can see and do is decided by the roles on your account, which Section 3 explains. When you sign in, the system looks up your roles and shapes the console around them: screens you have no business seeing are not in your menu, and buttons you are not entitled to press are not on your screen.

Hiding a button is not the same as preventing an action, and the system knows that. Every rule in this manual is checked a second time by the records themselves, underneath the screens. So a rule such as “only Finance may pay out” is not merely a button that has been hidden from you — the payment would be refused even if the button were somehow pressed. When this manual says something is refused or blocked, it means genuinely refused, not just discouraged.

2.2 Where uploaded documents are kept

Documents an applicant uploads are held in private storage, separate from the records that describe them. Nobody can reach a file by guessing its address. Each time you click View, the system creates a fresh, private link that works for a few minutes and then stops working, which is why a link you copied earlier will not open later — open the document from the case again instead.

2.3 The system can serve more than one lender

The platform was built so that other lenders could run on it alongside PRDF, each with its own branding, its own eligibility wording and its own web address. For PRDF this changes nothing day to day. It is worth knowing only because it explains why the branding and some of the public wording are treated as settings rather than as part of the pages themselves.

3. Roles and what each can do

There are eight workflow roles, plus management and administrative roles, plus the client.

3.1 Workflow roles

Each owns one stage of the review chain and sees only the cases assigned to them.

Role	Owns the stage	Responsible for
Intake Clerk	Submitted	Confirming intake and mandatory documents
Program Officer	Screening	Initial screening and compliance checks
Risk Analyst	Due Diligence	Financial and risk assessment — sets the risk grade
Review Committee	Evaluation	Viability and mandate alignment
Program Manager	Evaluation (shared)	Decision-making; may decline at any stage
Board	Approved	Authorising funding; may decline at any stage
Legal	Board Approved	Generating and issuing the loan agreement
Finance Officer	Contracting, Disbursed, In Repayment	Paying out and recording repayments

3.2 Management and administrative roles

Role	What it means
SuperAdmin	Everything, including granting Admin and resetting MFA
Admin	Full case access and any transition; manages user roles
Program Manager, Board	Full case visibility, reports and audit
Client	The applicant. Cannot enter the console at all

3.3 The rules that matter

- Only Finance Officer, Admin and SuperAdmin may move money. Anyone else who attempts to pay out or record a repayment is refused.
- Only a SuperAdmin may grant Admin.
- The Client role cannot be assigned from the console at all — it is granted when someone registers in the portal. This is deliberate: a staff member must not be able to turn a colleague into a borrower.
- A Client-only user is blocked from the console, and a user with no Client role is blocked from the portal.
- Stage workers see only cases assigned to them. Management roles see everything.

4. Signing in and access control

Figure 1 — The console sign-in. Staff accounts are created by an administrator; there is no self-registration.

Sign in with your PRDF email address and password. Your session persists across browser restarts and expires after a period of inactivity. Logout is at the top right of every screen.

4.1 If someone cannot get in

Symptom	Cause and fix
"Access restricted" after signing in	The account has no internal role — only Client . Grant them a role in User Access (Section 18)
Sign-in rejected	Wrong password, or the account does not exist. Staff accounts are created by an administrator
Signed in but every page fails to load	The console cannot reach the system behind it. This is one for PRDF’s technical contact, not something you can fix from the console
Locked out of a second factor	Use Reset MFA in User Access so they can enrol a new device

4.2 Layout

The left sidebar holds the six destinations: Dashboard, Pipeline, Loans, Portfolio, Reports, User Access. The top bar shows who you are signed in as, an alerts bell, your Profile, and Logout. A breadcrumb above the page title shows where you are.

What you see depends on your roles. A Finance Officer does not see User Access; a stage worker sees a shorter Pipeline. This manual describes the SuperAdmin view, which is the complete one.

5. The application lifecycle

Every application moves through a fixed sequence of eleven stages. The rail at the top of each case shows where it is.

Draft → Submitted → Screening → Due Diligence → Evaluation → Approved
→ Board Approved → Contracting → Disbursed → In Repayment → Closed

Two branches leave the main line at almost any point:

- Info Requested — more is needed from the applicant. Returns to Submitted or Screening once supplied.
- Rejected — the application is declined. Available from every stage up to Contracting.

5.1 Who may advance what

From stage	Next	Owned by
Draft	Submitted	The applicant
Submitted	Screening, Info Requested, Rejected	Intake Clerk
Screening	Due Diligence, Info Requested, Rejected	Program Officer
Due Diligence	Evaluation, Info Requested, Rejected	Risk Analyst
Evaluation	Approved, Rejected	Review Committee / Program Manager
Approved	Board Approved, Rejected	Board
Board Approved	Contracting, Rejected	Legal
Contracting	Disbursed	Finance Officer
Disbursed	In Repayment	Finance Officer
In Repayment	Closed	Finance Officer

Skipping a stage is genuinely impossible, not merely hidden. You cannot move a case from Submitted straight to Approved by any route at all — the records themselves refuse it. The dropdown only ever offers the moves that are permitted from the stage the case is in now.

5.2 Two gates worth knowing

- Submission requires every required document type to be present. This is genuinely enforced, not just discouraged.
- Approval requires every required document to be Verified, not merely uploaded. This is the single most common reason an approval is refused — see Section 9.

5.3 When the loan record is created

The loan is created when the case reaches Board Approved, in Pending Disbursement status. That is the moment the rate, days financed and fees are fixed — see Section 11.

6. Dashboard

Counter	What it counts
Pipeline Cases	Every open case you can see
In Review	Cases between Screening and Evaluation
Info Requested	Cases waiting on the applicant — these are stalled and need chasing
SLA Breached	Cases sitting longer than the service standard. Highlighted amber

Assigned Queue lists the cases you can act on, newest first, each with its amount, when it last moved, and its status. Click any row to open it. Tasks Due Today shows action items assigned to you (Section 15).

Read the SLA counter daily. It is the only place the console volunteers that work is ageing. A case can sit correctly assigned and entirely untouched for weeks without anything else flagging it.

7. Pipeline

Pipeline is the full case list. The filter chips are All open, Screening, Due Diligence, Evaluation, Info Requested, Approved, Contracting and SLA Breached. Cases past their service standard carry a red SLA breached · n days badge.

How a case is named. Every case reads {business name} {applicant's first name} {application date} — "Blue Harvest Aquaculture (Pty) Ltd Test 4 Sep 2026". The name is derived from the record, never stored, so it cannot drift from the client it describes, and the loan inherits it when the application is booked. Pipeline, the case file, My Loans and the applicant's own list therefore all call the same deal the same thing.

Before this, a case was labelled with whatever free text the applicant typed into "tell us more about how you'll use the funds". Older screenshots and any notes written before 28 September 2026 may still refer to cases that way.

7.1 The preview drawer

The preview is for triage — checking where something is without losing your place in the list. Open full case → goes to the case file; View documents jumps straight to its Documents tab.

8. The case file — Overview

Every case has the same three parts.

8.1 The lifecycle rail

Eleven numbered stages. Completed stages carry a tick, the current one is highlighted, the rest are greyed. This is the authoritative view of where a case stands.

8.2 The left rail

The top card is stage-aware guidance — it changes as the case moves, and tells you what this stage expects. Beneath it, Case actions:

Control	What it does
Assign to	Assigns the case to a staff member. Click Save assignment to apply
Change status	Offers only the transitions legal from the current stage
Status note	Optional, but see the advice in Section 10
Update status	Applies the transition
Request info	Sends the case back to the applicant with a note saying what is missing

8.3 The applicant's financial profile

Below the loan details, the Overview tab shows what the applicant entered at Step 2 of their own application:

Field	What to read into it
Monthly revenue	Self-reported average. Check it against the bank statements on the Documents tab rather than taking it at face value

Time in operation	Shown as, for example, 4 years 6 months . Less than a month means they answered zero to both — a genuinely new business, not missing data. A dash means the question was never asked, which is the case for every application created before 8 October 2026
Employees	Includes the owner-operator
Bank	Chosen from a fixed list. Should match the bank statements supplied

8.4 The eight tabs

Tab	Contents	Section
Overview	Applicant, business, amount, term, purpose, the applicant's financial profile, dates	8
Documents	Uploaded documents, inline viewer, verify and reject	9
Pricing	Credit-model quote and the risk grade decision	11
Money	Disbursement, repayments, schedule	13–14
Tasks	Action items against the case	15
Notes	Internal notes	15
History	Full audit trail of transitions	15
Advisory (NFS)	Non-financial support sessions logged	15

9. Documents tab

Figure 6 — The Documents tab. Chips across the top are the document types; the selected one opens in an inline viewer.

Each chip carries a status dot. Selecting one loads the file in a viewer so you can read it without downloading. Beneath the viewer: Download, Full screen, Verify and Reject.

9.1 The ten required documents

Document	Several files?
ID Document	No
Proof of Address	No

Approval is blocked until every required document is Verified. Uploaded is not enough. When you try to move a case to Approved, the system checks that every required document has at least one Verified copy, and refuses the move if any is missing. If an approval is rejected and the reason is not obvious, this is almost always why.

9.3 Rejecting a document

Reject marks a document as not accepted. The applicant sees the rejected badge against that document in their portal and can upload a replacement in its place — the slot stays open until they do. Rejecting does not change the case status and does not, on its own, notify them; see 21.2 for what they actually see.

9.4 Requesting a document

Rejecting handles a document that arrived and was not good enough. Request document handles the other case — something that never arrived at all, or something that is on no checklist.

Figure 8 — Request document sits at the top of the Documents tab. The dialog names the document, says where to find it, and fixes the file type the applicant may upload.

The dialog has four fields:

Field	What it does
Document type	One of the ten checklist types, or Other (not on this list) . A type with a request already open is shown as "— already requested" so you do not stack two asks for the same thing.
Document name	Appears only for Other , and is required there. This is the name the applicant sees, so write it as they would recognise it — "Signed lease agreement", not "lease".
Details	Optional, shown to the applicant verbatim underneath the document name. Where to find it, or what it has to show.
File type	PDF, Word (.doc or .docx), or any accepted type. This sets what their upload box will accept, so choosing PDF for something only issued as a Word file will block them.

Be specific, in the Details field. "Bank statements unclear — please upload the full three months including August" gets a useful answer. "More info needed" produces another round trip and another week. The Details field is the one the applicant actually reads.

What happens next

- The applicant gets an in-app notification and an upload slot on their status page — this is the whole point of the feature, and 21.1 shows it from their side.
- The Documents tab tells you what you are waiting for: "Waiting on the applicant for 1 requested document."
- When they upload against the request it closes itself and links to the document they sent, which then goes through the normal Verify / Reject flow in 9.2 and 9.3.
- If they later delete that document — which they can only do while the application is still a draft — the request reopens rather than sitting there claiming to be satisfied.

Withdraw request

Figure 9 — An open request. The banner names what is outstanding; the request stays visible until it is fulfilled or withdrawn.

Requesting a document does not move the case. It stays in whatever stage it was in. This is deliberate — a reviewer can ask for a payslip without parking the whole application in Info Requested, and an ask the applicant cannot see never gets answered. Use Request info in the left rail when you do want the case to stop and the status to say so.

Withdrawing a request

A request you raised in error is cancelled, not deleted. It stays on the case as part of its history, and the audit trail records both CreateDocumentRequest and CancelDocumentRequest against your name. There is no way to erase one, by design.

2. Choose the next status from Change status.
3. Write a status note saying what you checked and why you are moving it.
4. Click Update status.

Write the note every time. It is optional and it is the single most valuable thing in the case file. The History tab becomes the audit trail of the decision — and when a case is queried months later, or reviewed externally, notes are the only record of why. "Approved at R750 000 over 12 months at 17.00% (Moderate). All required documents verified." takes ten seconds and answers every future question.

11. Pricing tab and the risk grade

The Pricing tab does two different things, and the difference matters.

- The quote is a calculator. It computes and shows; it stores nothing.
- The risk grade decision is stored on the application, and is what the loan is actually booked at.

Figure 18 — Graded Moderate and quoted. The panel confirms "Saved as Moderate. The loan will be booked at this grade when the case is approved."

Choose the grade, click Calculate quote to check the numbers, then Save grade as .... The grade is stored against the application and audit-logged.

Grade the case before it reaches Board Approved. The loan is created at that point, at whatever grade is stored. If nothing is stored, it falls back to the legacy flat product rate and the case is booked at the wrong price. The warning on an ungraded case exists for exactly this reason.

The grade locks once the loan exists. After Board Approved the panel reads "This case is booked at ... The grade is now fixed — a booked loan keeps the rate it was priced on," and the save button is disabled. A booked rate is a snapshot; re-grading afterwards would disagree with what the client was told.

12. The credit model in full

Four income streams, one of which only applies when a client pays late. Capital is never revenue.

Component	Formula	When
Interest	$\text{Principal} \times \text{annual rate} \div 365 \times \text{days financed}$	Over the term
Initiation fee	Flat R1 000	Once-off
Management fee	$\text{Principal} \times 3\%$	Once-off
Penalty	$(\text{Principal} + \text{interest}) \times 2\% \times (\text{days late} \div 30)$	Only when late

12.1 The rate

Annual rate = Prime + the risk grade's margin. Prime is currently 10.5%.

Grade	Margin	Annual rate
Low	5.0%	15.5%
Moderate	6.5%	17.0%
High	8.5%	19.0%
Worst	10.5%	21.0%

12.2 Bullet, not amortising

Interest is simple, charged daily on the full principal, and frozen at maturity. There is no declining balance. The client makes one payment at maturity covering capital plus interest, so the repayment schedule has a single row.

12.3 Fees are deducted from the advance

The once-off fees are taken off the money paid out, not added to the schedule. This is why the model defines total due to funder as principal + interest and excludes fees.

12.4 The worked example

Item	Amount	How
Principal	R750 000,00	Requested
Annual rate	17.00%	Prime 10.5% + Moderate 6.5%
Days financed	365	$12 \text{ months} \times 365 \div 12$
Interest	R127 500,00	$750\,000 \times 17\% \div 365 \times 365$
Initiation fee	R1 000,00	Flat
Management fee	R22 500,00	$750\,000 \times 3\%$
Net advance	R726 500,00	$750\,000 - 23\,500$ — pay out this
Due at maturity	R877 500,00	$750\,000 + 127\,500$
Total client revenue	R151 000,00	$127\,500 + 23\,500$

12.5 Late payment

There is no grace period; penalty accrues from the first day late, linearly, and never compounds on earlier penalties. For the example above:

Days late	Penalty	Total revenue
30	R17 550,00	R168 550,00
60	R35 100,00	R186 100,00
90	R52 650,00	R203 650,00
120	R70 200,00	R221 200,00

Rounding is up to the cent. This can differ from the client's spreadsheet by a cent on some totals. It is a deliberate configuration, not a defect.

13. Money tab — disbursement

Once a case reaches Contracting the left rail reads "Ready for payout" and offers Go to Money →.

Figure	Meaning
Outstanding	Capital still owed
Principal	The amount advanced
Scheduled Due	Total of the schedule — capital plus interest
Interest Rate	The booked annual rate, with the grade beneath it
Term	Months, with days financed beneath
Status	Pending Disbursement, Disbursed, In Repayment or Closed
Initiation / Management fee	The once-off fees, snapshotted at booking
Net advance	What to actually pay out — principal less the fees

Pay out the net advance, not the principal. For a R750 000 loan the client receives R726 500; the R23 500 of fees is retained. The field is labelled "pay out this amount" for that reason, and the console will not let you disburse more than it.

13.1 Disbursing

1. Enter the Amount — the net advance.
2. Enter a Reference — use the bank's payment reference so the two records reconcile.
3. Click Disburse.

Figure 20 — After disbursing. Status Disbursed, Scheduled Due R877 500, and a single bullet instalment due at maturity.

Disbursing does four things at once: records the payment, sets the loan to Disbursed, moves the application to Disbursed, and generates the repayment schedule. The applicant sees all of it immediately in their portal — Section 22.2 shows exactly what appears on their side, including the balance question this reliably produces.

Disbursement is not reversible from the console. There is no undo. Check the amount and the reference before clicking.

14. Money tab — repayments

14.1 The repayment schedule

For a credit-model loan the schedule is a single row: the full principal plus interest, due on the maturity date. Each row shows its number, due date, amount due, amount paid, and status (Pending, Paid or Overdue).

14.2 Recording a repayment

1. Enter the Amount received.
2. Enter the Payment reference from the bank statement.
3. Click Record.

The payment is applied to the oldest unpaid instalment first, split into principal and interest components, and the outstanding balance reduces. Partial payments are allowed — the instalment stays Pending until fully covered.

Repayments have not been exercised end to end. Recording a repayment against the single-payment schedule PRDF uses was never tested before the system was handed over. Record the first live repayment with care and confirm the resulting balance before relying on it. This is listed in Section 24.

14.3 Moving a loan through repayment and closure

Advance the case from Disbursed to In Repayment once collection begins, and to Closed when the loan is fully settled. Both are Finance Officer transitions on the left rail.

Repayments are collected by debit order, as the client agrees in their consent declaration. The portal has no payment function by design; the console is where receipts are captured.

7. Screening to InfoRequested

History is appended to automatically and cannot be edited. It is what you produce when a decision is queried — which is the argument for writing a real note on every transition.

Alongside status changes, the trail records document decisions and document requests, each against the name of whoever made them:

Entry	Written when
CreateDocumentRequest	You ask the applicant for a document (9.4)
CancelDocumentRequest	You withdraw that request
Status transitions	Every stage change, with your note

A withdrawn request stays in the trail rather than disappearing, so "we never asked for that" is always checkable.

Arrears lists every overdue instalment across the book. An empty arrears panel is the goal; anything in it needs collections attention.

Export Excel downloads the arrears book as an `.xlsx` workbook for reporting or reconciliation outside the system. Amounts come through as numbers rather than text, so they total and sort correctly in Excel.

Check arrears before month end. Penalties accrue daily with no grace period, so a missed instalment gets more expensive for the client every day it is left. Early contact is cheaper for everyone.

Group	Contents
All reports	Everything on one page
Performance	Turnaround times, pipeline conversion, staff productivity
Portfolio & Risk	Exposure, arrears ageing, concentration
Compliance	Demographic and development-impact reporting
Activity	Audit and user activity

The two headline figures are Average turnaround in days and Applications measured. The period selector at the top right scopes everything on the page.

17.1 The charts

- Pipeline Status Summary — how many cases sit at each stage. Tall bars in the middle mean a bottleneck.
- Origination Volume Trend — value originated over time.
- Pipeline Conversion — how many cases made each transition. Where the bars narrow is where applications are being lost.
- Staff Productivity — tasks completed and applications handled, per person.

17.2 Export Center

At the bottom of the page, Export Center lists every report that can be downloaded, with a Download button beside each. All of them produce an Excel workbook (.xlsx).

Report	What it contains
Pipeline Snapshot	Case count and total value at each status
Origination Trends	Loans originated and total volume, by month
Staff Productivity	Tasks completed and applications handled, per person
Audit Log	Who did what, when, to which record
Demographic Breakdown	Two sheets — by gender, and by designation
Debtors Book Age Analysis	Instalments and outstanding value per ageing bucket
Province Breakdown	Two sheets — by province, and by spatial type

The download reflects the period selector, so set that first. Reports that cover two dimensions arrive as two worksheets in one workbook rather than stacked into a single flat table.

Reports are visible to management roles only — SuperAdmin, Admin, Program Manager and Board. Stage workers do not see this page, deliberately: it aggregates across cases they have no business seeing.

18. User Access

Figure 28 — User Access, showing the first four accounts. Names and email addresses have been withheld from this screenshot; on the live screen you see each person's real name and address.

Four counters summarise the account base: visible users, internal users, clients, and admins. Search by name or email, and filter by user type or role.

18.1 Granting and removing roles

- To grant: choose a role in the Assign Role dropdown on that person's row and click Assign.
- To remove: click the x on the role chip.
- Reset MFA clears that user's authenticators so they can enrol a new device. Use when someone loses their phone.

18.2 The rules

Rule	Why
The Client role cannot be assigned here	It is granted by registering in the portal. Staff must not be able to make a colleague a borrower
Only a SuperAdmin may grant Admin	Administrative access is the keys to the system
Platform ownership is managed outside the app	Noted on the screen itself

This screen shows real personal data. Live email addresses and names of applicants and staff. Do not screenshot it into documents, tickets or chat without masking, and apply the same care you would to any personal information under POPIA.

Least privilege. Grant the narrowest role that lets someone do their job, and remove roles when people change duties. Every extra Admin is another account that can move money and change access.

19.1 Notifications

The bell in the top bar carries a count of unread items. Notifications are raised on status changes, and by scheduled scans for arrears, due tasks and stale cases.

Notifications are in-app only. Nothing is emailed or texted, to staff or to applicants. If a case is waiting on someone, the system will not chase them — the dashboard SLA counter and the arrears panel are your early warning. Adding email delivery is listed in Section 24.

20. What the client sees

Understanding the applicant's view makes support calls much shorter. The Client Portal is documented in full in its own manual; this is the summary. Sections 21 and 22 then show the screens you personally cause to change.

Their screen	What it shows
Landing page	A calculator quoting the cheapest rate, marked indicative
Eligibility check	Self-assessment against PRDF's criteria. Not recorded, not sent to you
Apply	Five steps: business profile, financials, loan details, documents, review
Consent declaration	Twelve POPIA, policy and terms statements, all must be YES

Figure 30 — The applicant's Applications list. Until recently this redirected them into the apply wizard, so they had no way to see what they had already sent you.

Opening a submitted application shows them a read-only copy of what they sent — the same five sections, with no edit controls. This is a real restriction rather than hidden buttons, so a submitted application cannot be altered from the portal at all.

20.1 Where their view differs from yours

Expect this support call. "The tracker says nothing has happened." While a case sits in Screening, Due Diligence, Evaluation, Board Approved or Contracting, the client's timeline shows every milestone greyed out — including "Application Submitted". Their status badge is correct; the circles are not. Reassure them and quote the status label. This is item 1 in Section 24.

21. Your action, their screen

This section pairs the things you do with what the applicant sees when you do them. It exists because two questions come up constantly and neither is answered by looking at the console alone: if I click this, what happens on their side? and they are phoning about something — what are they looking at?

Only screens you cause are shown here. The landing page, the calculator, the eligibility check and the five wizard steps happen before you are involved and live in the Client Portal manual instead.

21.1 You request a document

You raise the request in 9.4. On their side it arrives as a panel at the top of the status card for that application, with an upload box attached to each outstanding item.

Three things are worth knowing when this comes up on a call:

- They get an in-app notification as well as the panel. It is one of only two notifications the portal sends them — see the table in 21.5.
- The upload box only accepts the file type you picked. If they say "it won't let me attach it", check what you chose in the File type field before anything else.
- The panel is not tied to Info Requested. It shows on any status, so an applicant can be asked for a document while their case is still progressing normally.

When they upload, the ask closes itself and the document appears on your Documents tab for verification.

Figure 33 — The same case once the applicant has answered. The request is satisfied and the document is now waiting on your Verify / Reject decision.

21.2 You verify or reject a document

Your decision in 9.2 and 9.3 shows against that document on their Documents page, as a badge.

Figure 34 — The applicant's Documents page. Your decisions appear as badges against each document; a rejected one keeps its Replace link so they can send a new copy.

Note the Select application picker at the top. An applicant with more than one application sees the documents for whichever is selected, which is not necessarily the case you are discussing — worth confirming at the start of a call.

Neither one notifies them. Verifying and rejecting change the badge silently. An applicant who is not already looking at the page will not know you rejected something — so if a rejection is blocking the case, raise a document request or a Request info alongside it, or telephone them.

21.3 You move the case forward

Your eleven stages do not collapse neatly into their six milestones. Six of your statuses are not in the tracker's vocabulary at all, and when a case is in one of them the applicant's entire timeline goes blank — every milestone grey, including the "Application Submitted" they have already passed. Only their status badge stays correct.

Your stage	Their timeline shows	What they are told
Draft	No timeline	A draft card inviting them to resume
Submitted	Application Submitted , active	Received, awaiting review
Screening	Nothing — all six grey	No visible progress at all for the whole of your review. This is the complaint in 21.6
Due Diligence
Evaluation
Info Requested	Under Review , active	"Action required", with your note. Paradoxically the clearest their timeline looks during review
Approved	Approved , active	Approved — but see 21.4, this is not money

PRDF Admin Console — Administrator's Manual

Page 47 of 63

Board Approved	Nothing — all six grey	Approval appears to be withdrawn : the timeline they saw a moment ago goes blank again
Contracting
Disbursed	Funds Disbursed , active	Funds released; My Loans becomes populated
In Repayment	In Repayment , active	Balance and schedule visible
Closed	Loan Closed , active	Fully repaid
Rejected	Nothing — all six grey	They are not told they were declined. The timeline simply blanks

Read the Board Approved and Rejected rows twice. An applicant watching their tracker sees "Approved" light up, and then — when you move the case to Board Approved, which is forward progress — watches it go blank again. A declined applicant is never told they were declined by the timeline at all. Neither is a display quirk you can leave to explain itself on a call: if you decline a case, telephone them, and if you are moving an approved case onward, warn them their tracker will appear to reset.

The reason is simple enough: the tracker was only ever taught five of the eleven stages a case can be in. When a case reaches a stage it does not recognise, it cannot tell which milestones have been passed, so it greys out all of them rather than guessing. It is the first item in Section 24 and the most worthwhile thing on that list to fix.

The figure below is the whole effect in one screen — the same applicant's status page with seven applications on it, at seven different stages.

Figure 36 — Evidence for the table above. Reading down: Disbursed and In Repayment render correctly; Board Approved is entirely blank; Approved renders correctly; Due Diligence, Screening and Evaluation are all blank. Four of the seven tell the applicant nothing at all, and the blank one sits directly below a correct one from the same business.

21.4 You approve, or decline

Approval renders properly — the Naledi Construction card in the figure above shows Submitted and Under Review ticked with Approved active. It is the step after approval that causes trouble, because moving the case to Board Approved blanks that same timeline (21.3).

Approving also does not release funds and does not create anything they can act on. Between your Approved and their money there is still Board Approved, Contracting and disbursement. Applicants routinely read "Approved" as "paid", so it is worth saying explicitly on the call — and worth warning them that their tracker is about to go blank.

A declined applicant is not told. Rejected is not in the tracker's vocabulary either, so declining a case blanks their timeline exactly as Screening does. There is no "not approved" state on their side and no notification that says it in plain words. Telephone anyone you decline.

21.5 Which of your actions actually notify them

The portal sends the applicant only two kinds of in-app notification. Everything else changes quietly and is only noticed if they happen to look.

Your action	Notifies?	What they see
Request a document (9.4)	Yes	Notification plus the upload panel in 21.1
Change the case status (10)	Yes	Notification; milestones redraw per 21.3
Request info (left rail)	Yes, as a status change	"Action required" block
Verify a document	No	Badge changes silently
Reject a document	No	Badge changes silently, slot reopens
Assign the case to a colleague	No	Nothing — internal only
Add a note, task or advisory entry	No	Nothing — internal only
Set or change the risk grade	No	Nothing until the loan is booked
Record a repayment (14.2)	No	Balance and history update silently

21.6 The support calls this produces

They say	They are looking at	Check
"Nothing has happened for weeks"	Status page, all milestones grey	The known display fault in 24.1 — quote them the status badge instead
"I was approved, where is my money?"	Status page, Approved	Whether the case has reached Disbursed — see 21.4 and Section 22
"It won't let me upload the file"	The panel in 21.1	The File type you chose on the request
"I don't know what you want from me"	An empty or vague request	The Details text on the request — reissue it with specifics
"You rejected it but didn't tell me"	Documents page	Correct — rejection is silent. See the warning in 21.2
"I can't fix a mistake on my application"	Read-only submitted application	Correct and enforced server-side. They cannot edit; you amend it for them

"How do I pay?"	My Loans	There is no payment function in the portal. Collection is by debit order and you record the receipt — see 22.4
-----------------	----------	--

22. After approval — the client's loan

Everything to this point has been an application. From disbursement onward the applicant has a loan account, and their portal changes shape. This section follows that from their side, in the order they experience it.

22.1 Approved, but nothing has moved

Covered in 21.4 and repeated here because it generates more calls than anything else: Approved is not funded. Their status reads Approved through your Approved, Board Approved and Contracting stages. My Loans is still empty. There is nothing for them to do and nothing for them to see beyond the milestone.

22.2 You disburse — their loan appears

The moment you record disbursement in 13.1, three things change for them at once: the Disbursed milestone lights up, Home starts showing an outstanding balance, and My Loans stops being empty.

The screenshot shows the PRDF Client Portal interface. The left sidebar contains navigation links: Home, Applications, Documents, My Loans, and Status. The main content area is titled 'GOOD MORNING, TEST CLIENT' and includes a greeting: 'Here is an overview of your business funding journey.' Below this, there is a section for 'ACTIVE APPLICATION' with the title 'Blue Harvest Aquaculture (Pty) Ltd Test 26 Sep 2026' and a note: 'Your loan has been disbursed to your business account.' A 'DISBURSED' status tag is visible. Three summary cards are displayed: 'APPLICATIONS SUBMITTED' with a value of 7, 'ACTIVE LOANS' with a value of 2, and 'AMOUNT OUTSTANDING' with a value of R 750 000. A 'Recent Activity' table is shown at the bottom, listing applications with their update dates, amounts, and statuses.

Figure 38 — My Loans. The loan carries the same derived name as the application it came from, so the two reconcile.

Expect a question about the amount. A client who asked for R500 000 receives less than that in their bank account — the initiation fee and the management fee are deducted from the advance, as Section 12.3 explains — but the balance shown here is what they owe, which is the full principal plus interest. The two numbers are both correct and they will not look it. Section 12.4 has the worked example to read out.

22.3 What they can see about the loan

Opening the loan shows the account and its repayment schedule: what is due, when, and what has been paid.

22.4 The first payment

Repayment is collected by direct debit order, which is what the applicant agreed to in their consent declaration. Collection happens outside the system, and the portal has no payment function — there is no card capture, no way to set up or amend the debit order, and no "pay now" button anywhere in it. The loan only reflects a collection once you record it on the Money tab.

Figure 41 — Their side, immediately afterwards. The instalment is settled, the history has a row, and the outstanding balance has come down.

Until you record it, they see nothing. An applicant who paid on Friday and checks on Monday will see an unchanged balance and an instalment still outstanding, and will reasonably conclude the payment was lost. This is the single most avoidable complaint in the system: record receipts promptly, because the portal has no other way of knowing.

22.5 Through repayment to closure

- In repayment. Each receipt you record reduces the balance and adds a history row. Nothing notifies them.
- Falling behind. Overdue instalments appear on your Portfolio ageing report (16.2). Penalties accrue daily with no grace period, per Section 12.5. The applicant sees the increased balance but gets no warning before it happens.
- Settled. When the loan closes, their milestone moves to Closed and the loan stays visible in My Loans as a record.

What the applicant can never do. Pay through the portal, edit a submitted application, change their banking details, upload a document nobody asked for once the application has left Draft, or see your internal notes, tasks, assignments, risk grade or advisory entries. If they need any of those, they need you.

23. What you can change yourself

Some of the numbers and rules in this system are settings, not part of how it is built. They can be changed without anyone rewriting the system, and the change takes effect across both the console and the client portal within about half an hour. Knowing which is which saves a great deal of time: if a value is in the first group below, you do not need to wait for a software release to change it.

You will not change these yourself from the console — there is no settings screen for them yet. You ask PRDF's technical contact, who makes the change directly. The point of this section is that you know what is possible, and roughly what to expect when you ask.

What can change	How quickly	What it affects
The smallest and largest loan, and the shortest and longest term	Same day	The calculator on the public website, and what the application form will accept
Which documents an applicant must supply	Same day	The applicant's document checklist, and what blocks approval
The Prime rate, the initiation fee and the management fee	Same day	Every new quote and every new loan from that moment on
How much each risk grade adds to the rate	Same day	Pricing on cases graded after the change
The wording of the eligibility criteria	Needs a software release	The public eligibility check
The wording of the declaration applicants sign	Needs a software release	What new applicants agree to

23.1 Changing the smallest and largest loan

The calculator, the application form and the checks behind them all read the same pair of figures. Change them once and everything follows — the sliders on the public site, the amount the form will accept, and the check that runs when a case is saved.

Tightening the range catches existing cases late. If you reduce the maximum, an application already in the pipeline for more than the new figure is not rejected straight away. It carries on normally until the next time someone saves a change to it, and then it fails. So after tightening a range, ask for a list of live cases that now fall outside it, and re-quote those deliberately rather than discovering them one at a time.

23.2 Changing the Prime rate or the fees

When Prime moves, this must be updated. Everything PRDF quotes publicly is expressed as “Prime plus a margin” rather than as a fixed percentage, precisely so that the quote stays truthful when Prime changes — but only if the stored Prime rate is kept current.

The same setting holds the initiation fee, the management fee percentage, the penalty rate and the penalty period.

Loans already on the book are not affected. When a loan is paid out, its rate, its fees and its interest are written onto that loan and fixed there. Changing the settings afterwards never re-prices a loan that has already been sold, so you can update Prime without worrying about disturbing existing agreements.

23.3 Changing which documents are required

Documents can be added to or removed from the required list at any time. A document type that has never been used before also needs a proper name added to the system, otherwise it appears on screen under an internal label that will mean nothing to the applicant. Mention it when you ask.

23.4 Changing the declaration applicants sign

The declaration can be reworded, but it is not a casual edit. Every applicant's agreement is stored against the exact wording they were shown, so the wording carries a stamp that must be updated at the same time. That is what lets PRDF demonstrate, later, precisely what any given applicant agreed to.

The present wording has not been through legal review. It is recorded and stamped correctly, so nothing is lost, but it has not been signed off by a lawyer. This is listed in Section 24.

24. Things to be aware of

Every system has rough edges, and it is better to know about them than to meet them during a client call. None of the points below stops an application being assessed, approved or paid out. They are listed here so that what PRDF is accepting is clear, and so that you recognise each one if it happens to you.

The first group affects what your applicants see, so it is the group most likely to generate a phone call.

24.1 Things your applicants will notice

What happens	What it means for you
The applicant's progress tracker goes blank at most stages	The tracker only recognises five of the eleven stages a case can be in. At any other stage — Screening, Due Diligence, Evaluation, Board Approved, Contracting, or when a case is declined — every circle turns grey, including the ones the applicant has already passed. The status wording beside it stays correct throughout. Two consequences are worth remembering: moving an approved case onward to Board Approved makes it look as though approval has been withdrawn, and a declined applicant is shown nothing that says so. This is the most important item on the list. See 21.3 and 21.6.
A declined applicant is not told	There is no screen or message that says “not approved”. Telephone anyone you decline, and follow up in writing.
Rejecting a document is silent	The badge changes in the applicant's portal, but nothing tells them to go and look. Raise a document request at the same time, or telephone. See 21.2.
Nobody is notified outside the system	There are no emails and no SMS messages — neither to applicants nor to staff. Everything is a message inside the portal or the console, which only reaches someone who signs in. Until this changes, treat the telephone as part of the process.
An applicant cannot reset their own password	The reset email links to a page that has not been built. They must ask PRDF, and an administrator resets it for them.
The figure on the applicant's home screen can differ from their loan	Their home screen adds up what they asked for, which is not the same as what they owe. Their loan account is the authoritative figure — quote that one.

24.2 Things to be careful about internally

What happens	What it means for you
Repayments have not been tested from end to end	Recording a repayment against the single-payment schedule PRDF uses has never been done on a real loan. Record the first live repayment carefully and check the resulting balance before relying on it.
The declaration wording has not been through legal review	It is recorded and stamped correctly against each applicant, but a lawyer has not approved the words. See 23.4.
There is no limit on the size of an uploaded file	Files go straight to storage without passing through the system, so nothing currently checks how large they are. This is a setting that can be switched on without changing the software.
Staff are not required to use a second security factor	Two-step sign-in can be set up and reset, but nobody is obliged to use it — including the people who can move money. Worth requiring for those roles.
Loans paid out before 26 September 2026 were priced the old way	They carry a flat rate, instalments rather than a single payment, and no fees. They have deliberately been left exactly as they were rather than rewritten. Any that need the current pricing must be re-quoted on purpose.

A term in months is charged in days	Three months is charged as 91 days rather than 90, which adds about 1 % to the interest on that quote. This is deliberate: treating every month as 30 days would under-charge a full year by five days.
Checks before a release are done by hand	There is no automatic suite that re-tests the system after a change, so a change in one place can disturb another without anyone being warned. Until that exists, test the lifecycle and the money screens after any update.
